

Why your audience might care?

Your audience already enjoys discovering the everyday differences between Britain and America. Across the Pond brings those differences together in one practical companion that travellers, newcomers and families can rely on every day.

Why I built it?

Friends, family and colleagues on both sides of the Atlantic kept asking me the same practical questions. I soon realised the information existed—but it was scattered across different apps, websites and guidebooks. There wasn't one trusted place that brought together the practical answers and explained why the differences exist. That's the app I set out to build.

About Neil Mitchell

I'm originally from Dorset, England, and have lived in the United States for more than 35 years. After a career in the technology industry, I created Across the Pond to help others (and myself!) feel more at home on either side of the Atlantic.

Links

Website
acrossthepondapp.com

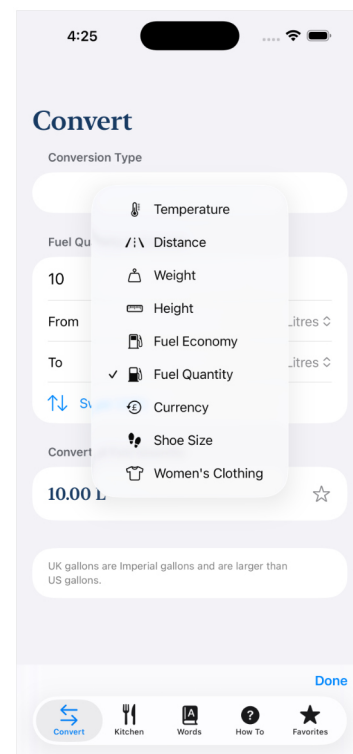

AppStore
Across the Pond

Contact Neil
Neil Mitchell

What is Across the Pond?

Across the Pond is a practical iPhone companion that helps people navigate everyday life between Britain and America. It combines everyday and kitchen conversions, British and American words and expressions, and clear guidance on the cultural differences that often confuse visitors, newcomers and even long-time residents—all in one carefully curated app.

If you'd like to try Across the Pond, I'd be delighted to send you a complimentary App Store promo code

No ads

No subscriptions

No account required

One-time purchase

Works offline

Made by a Brit who has lived in America for 35 years